NIP-AND-TUCK BATH

BETTER, NOT BIGGER, WAS THE PLAN FOR THIS BATH IN A COTTAGE-STYLE HOME AT LAKE OSWEGO, OREGON.

fter 15 years, and having raised three children, Debbie and David Selby finally got around to the remodeling they'd always talked about in their circa-1919 cottage on Oregon's Lake Oswego. "We just postponed it for a lot of reasons," Debbie says. "Now we're at a time in our lives when we could do it."

To help them squeeze more function out of their home's 1,900 square feet, the Selbys hired remodeling contractors Lee and Lori Zajic, of N.W. Renovations & Design Co. A new master bath sat at the top of the Selbys' wish list, along with a laundry area that Debbie and David Selby gave their cottage bath vintage-style fixtures and a fresh palette of celery green and off white. The flooring is real linoleum, an environment-friendly product made of linseed oil, rosins, and wood flour.
